On the same day, the delegation visited the Patriarchal Conception Convent to meet with Mother Superior Juliana (Kaleda) and the sisters. A grand reception was given in honour of the guests from Egypt after which the abbess talked to the delegation members with many of whom she had met last year as a member of the Moscow Patriarchate delegation of abbots and abbesses on their visit to Egypt.

'The Coptic Church', he said, is a guardian of old traditions of Christian devotion, which have never been interrupted'. Bishop Daniel, the head of the delegation, on his part, warmly thanked the metropolitan for the generous reception and asked to convey to the Primate of the Russian Orthodox Church best regards and wishes from the Coptic Patriarch Tawadros II.

In the evening of that day, the delegation of the Coptic Church was solemnly received by the brethren of the Novospassky Monastery and their father superior, the first vicar of the Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia, Bishop Dionisy of Voskresensk.

On September 15, the guests from Egypt made a tour of monasteries and convents in the Moscow Region. In the Khotkovo Convent of the Protecting Veil, they venerated the holy relics of St. Sergius of Radonezh, a saint known and revered in the Coptic Church. The representatives of Patriarch Tawadros II were warmly welcomed by Bishop Paramon, abbot of the St. Sergius Laura of the Holy Trinity, and Sister Olympiada (Baranova), abbess of the convent in Khotkovo.

When in Moscow, the delegation visited the Cathedral Church of Christ the Saviour, the St. Daniel and the Zaikonospassky Monasteries and made a tour of the historic center of the Russian capital city.
