The first Church of the Dormition was consecrated in the capital of China in 1723, at the place where descendants of the captive Russian Cossacks, who had defended the Albazin, used to live. The church was destroyed in 1900 during the Boxer Rebellion. In 1904, the main church of the Russian Ecclesiastical Mission in China, dedicated to all holy martyrs, was built there. It was ruined in 1957. In 2007, a memorial sign and a memorial cross were installed at that place, in the territory of the Embassy of the Russian Federation in the People's Republic of China.

At the time of the construction of the Church of All Holy Martyrs, a new Church of the Dormition, a temporary one, was built in the territory of the Mission. It happened in 1903. In 1954, the Mission in China was closed and its territory was used by the Embassy of the USSR which converted the Church of the Dormition into a garage in 1957.

The church was restored in 2009 and, with the blessing of His Holiness Patriarch Kirill of Moscow and All Russia, consecrated by Bishop (now Archbishop) Mark of Yegorievsk on the 13th of October 2009. That same day, Mr. Vladimir Putin, then the Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation, who had paid much attention to the restoration of the only Orthodox church in Beijing, visited the Church of the Dormition of the Most Holy Theotokos.
