

A conference to be held in Moscow on discrimination and persecution against Christians in various parts of the world

An international conference on Freedom of Faith: the Problem of Discrimination and Persecution against Christians will be held from November 30 to December 1, 2011, in Moscow. It has been initiated by the Russian Orthodox Church with the support of the Christian Inter-Confessional Committee (CICC).

The Moscow Patriarchate is concerned over violations of the rights of Christians in various countries, which have been committed on a mass scale in recent years. The political transformations in the Middle East and North Africa countries have had as one of their consequences a large-scale emigration of believers from the region.

The Russian Orthodox Church has invited for discussion leaders of Orthodox, Oriental Orthodox, Catholic and Protestant religious communities including in the regions where the number of violations of the rights of Christians is growing. Attending the Conference will be experts, representatives of the public and of international organizations.
