Orthodox parish in Chiang Mai hands over oxygen devices for COVID-19 patients

The parishes in the Diocese of Thailand continue to render assistance to the citizens of the country, who have been struck by COVID-19. On July 12, 2021, with the financial support of the diocesan administration office, St. Vladimir's parish in the city of Chiang Mai in the north of Thailand handed over two oxygen devices and basic-needs products to the regional center for the support of COVID patients.

Deacon Paul Srisumoro was appointed coordinator of this charity action. The head of the local municipality presented him to those gathered on the occasion. Deacon Paul told them about the Orthodoxy in Thailand. The administrative officials of the city expressed gratitude to the Diocese of Thailand, promising every possible support to the activity of the Church.

In the situation of the sanitary isolation of Chiang Mai from other provinces and in view of poor resources of St. Vladimir's parish, members of other Orthodox parishes in Thailand had rendered their support to this charity action.

Secretary of the Diocese of Thailand, Archimandrite Oleg (Cherepanin), called upon the faithful to continue their unceasing help to those in need and to intensify their prayers for the deliverance of the country from the disease.
