Then the congregation was addressed by Metropolitan Hilarion:

"Your Eminence, Venerable Metropolitan Dionisy,
Your Eminences, Metropolitan Niphon and Metropolitan Zinovy,
Your Grace Bishop Anthony,
Dear Fathers, Venerable Mother Superior,
Dear Brothers and Sisters!

I would like first of all to thank God for the years that I have lived on this earth and, most importantly, for the Lord's call to me from my youth to join His Holy Church, and every day I receive from the Church spiritual nourishment, spiritual consolation and inspiration for all the works that the Lord has entrusted to me through the Supreme Authority. Without this inspiration it was impossible to accomplish anything from what was accomplished and to what is being accomplished.

The service of an ordinary parish priest exceeds human resources, for a priest should either take upon himself the sorrows, illnesses, sins of other people or learn to let all this go through his heart and only after that entrust it on God. And as regards bishops as those who are charged by the Supreme Authority with very important tasks, then this responsibility grows multiply. And no human resources would be sufficient to carry out these church services, if the Lord Himself did not strengthen us, clergy, by His grace.

Sometimes it happens in our life so that our physical resources weaken. But our spiritual resources should never weaken; there should never be what the modern language calls burnout, when one suddenly turns off the service one carries out. It is the saddest thing that may happen to a church minister. God grant that none of us may ever experience these moments of which today's clergy sometimes complain.

The Lord, giving us strength for priestly service, always gives us an opportunity for communicating with Him through prayer, through the holy Eucharist, for partaking of the Holy Mysteries of Christ. It is what gives us strength to carry out our service.

I would like to cordially thank His Holiness Patriarch Kirill of Moscow and All Russia, who over a quarter century ago called me to his team and whose helper I have been all these years. I thank for trust in me, for the opportunity for me to be responsible for one of the most important spheres of church work - external church relations. I rejoice today in having beside me today the staff of the Department for External Church Relations.

I would like to thank cordially through you, dear Metropolitan Niphon, His Beatitude Patriarch John X of Antioch and All the East for the kind words he conveyed through you and for the good co-work that, in many ways thanks to you, has been established between our two Churches.

I would like to convey my cordial gratitude to His Holiness Patriarch Porfirije of Serbia through you, dear Metropolitan Anthony, and to thank you for longstanding conscientious service that you carry out strengthening bilateral relations between our Churches.

I would ask you, dear Father Seraphim to convey my gratitude to His Beatitude Rostislav, Metropolitan of the Czech Lands and Slovakia, for the kind words he addressed to me on this memorable day and to thank you for the service you carry out for the sake of strengthening relations between the Russian Orthodox Church and the Orthodox Church of the Czech Lands and Slovakia.

I would like to thank cordially His Beatitude Daniel, Patriarch of Romania, His Beatitude Patriarch Neophyte of Bulgaria, His Beatitude Sava, Metropolitan of Warsaw and All Poland, His Beatitude Tikhon, Metropolitan of All America and Canada, for the birthday greetings they sent to me.

We are going through a difficult time when the crisis of inter-Orthodox relations has been exacerbated by the crisis that has now enveloped the whole world. We pray that the misfortune that has befallen us may soon come to an end. We pray that the Lord may grant all of us good health and salvation and success in our undertakings.

I would like to hope very much that the time of grief will soon pass and joyful times will come, when we will be able to lift up with gratitude to God our prayers of thanks for delivering us from the pernicious infection”.

Then Metropolitan Hilarion presented Patriarchal awards to the DECR staff members in connection with the 75th anniversary of the Department for External Church Relations.
