And now, Master and brother, receive the pastoral staff, and ascend to the throne of Senior Hierarch, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and pray to His Most-Pure Mother for all of Orthodox Christianity and for our Church which you are entrusted with, living in the diaspora, and save them as a good shepherd, and may the Lord God grant you health and well-being for many years.”

A protodeacon then intoned Many Years to His Holiness the Patriarch and the newly-installed Primate of the Russian Orthodox Church Outside of Russia according to the customary rite.

Having receiving the archpastoral staff, which had been blessed upon the relics of St Tikhon, Patriarch-Confessor of All Russia, Metropolitan Nicholas said:

“May the Almighty and Omnipotent Right Hand of the Most-High preserve and strengthen us all. May He grant peace and quietude to His Holy Church and our Fatherland from enemies seen and unseen, deliverance and bolstering of Orthodox Christianity. To you my brethren archpastors and our entire Church Abroad, and to all Orthodox Christians, I wish health and well-being for many years.”

His Eminence then turned to the congregation with a Primatial sermon, after which the choir sang Tebe Boga khvalim [Glory be to God].
