His Holiness Patriarch Kirill addressed the audience with a closing speech, in which he noted the importance of the forum and expressed gratitude to all its participants. The Primate of the Russian Church said, "I would like once again to thank everyone attending the International Christmas Educational Readings, which has become a forum of great importance and unites clergy, educators, and members of the public for discussing issues related to education and upbringing, thus shaping the future of our people and our country.

"It is my strong conviction that the experience gained through the Christmas Readings is unique. Nothing like this happens anywhere in the world. When creating this remarkable forum, we were guided by very concrete tasks. We aimed at ensuring that the words of Orthodox Christians about religious topics as well as about various aspects of life would reach consciousness of our society and our people.

"Why is this important? It is because not everyone goes to church. Some remain in doubt, others cannot be on their feet for a long time, and still others cannot listen carefully to sermons. Television now helps, and there are very good TV programs informing viewers about church life, but no television can compete with real communication, when experience and knowledge are shared and a real lively discussion is revolved around important topics.

"We work for awakening potential facilities of our parish activists, so that the important message that the Church is bringing to the world could be heard not only from the ambo, but also from laypeople, thus helping those far from the Church to understand the Russian Church at the present time, to appreciate its activity, and see its significance for the well-being of our people.

"We are carrying out this important mission to the best of our abilities, and I would like to express my most heartfelt thanks to all those who have organized the event, worked, delivered speeches, and to those who have listened and will bring the ideas found in this hall to their parishes, to the youth and public organizations, where these ideas can help people understand the situation of the Church in our country, and, most importantly, hear the voice of the Church on issues that are addressed in sermons not so often.

“I invoke God’s blessing upon all of you and ask you to convey my blessing to those who delegated you. I do hope that, by God’s grace, the wonderful tradition of holding the International Christmas Readings in the capital city will continue well into the future.”

The meeting was broadcast on “Russia 24”, “Soyuz” and “Spas” TV channels; on Patriarchia.ru, the official website of the Russian Orthodox Church; as well as on the portal of the International Christmas Readings and in the “PravObraz” mobile application.

After the official part of the meeting, a concert took place.
